A draft of our parish directory is being circulated this morning. Please look over your entry and mark any corrections. Ask Jerris.

Spotlight on Hymnody: Charles Wesley's much-loved text "Christ, whose glory fills the skies" (Hymn #7) has been associated with the tune called RATISBON for more than a century. Did you know Charles and his brother John were both Anglican priests? Their devotional method of strict adherence to the Book of Common Prayer gave birth to the denominations we call "Methodist" today.

Who Knew? The Hebrew word we transliterate and know as "hosanna" does not mean "praise God," but something more like "Save us, O God," or "Deliver us, we pray." How does this change our understanding of the Sanctus, in which we sing "Hosanna in the highest"?

— adapted from Gail Ramshaw, "Wording the Sanctus"

Quote of the Week: My sense is if the Episcopal Church can't stand challenge within its own ranks, then it is not a church I would want to be a member of anyway. "

—John Shelby Spong, VIII Bishop of Newark

What's your thinking on Columbus Day? Some consider it a way to honor Italian heritage, since Christopher Columbus was from Italy. Others object to the notion that Columbus "discovered" America, as indigenous people inhabited his continent for more than 20,000 years before 1492. They see Columbus as the start of European colonization and the suffering of native populations. Is there an Anglican middle way?
